1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

4. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Rosenfeld.

Rosenfeld teaches a method of analyzing prostaglandin E2 (PGE2) using PFBBR and PFBHOX derivatizing agents in situ on a column. Samples are then subjected to gas chromatography and electron capture and the trace shown in Figure 8. Two peaks are labeled PGE2, indicating that two derivatives are present. It is the examiner's position that the X-axis on the chromatographic trace is time because the beginning and end of the axis are labeled "start" and "stop" which indicate reference to time. See Example 16. Rosenfeld additionally teaches separation of derivatives of THC formed metabolically and further derivatized in situ (Figures 4A-4B).

5. Claims 1-22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Rosenfeld.

6. Rosenfeld additionally teaches that Mass Spec analysis can be used in place of Electron Capture (EC) in the PGE2 analysis (col. 19, lines 25-26) and that MS typically includes negative ion chemical ionization mode (col. 1, lines 25-30).

7. Rosenfeld fails to explicitly teach determining retention times, ionizing derivatized analytes or mass spec using negative chemical ionization for the PGE2 or THC analyses.

8. With respect to the alternative rejection, if it is applicant's position that Rosenfeld does not determine retention times, it would have been obvious to determine retention times in order to identify peaks as shown in the Figures and as was known in the art. It would have been obvious to ionize the derivatized analytes in order to perform EC, Mass Spec or Mass Spec with negative ion chemical ionization mode in order to perform the analyses taught or suggested by Rosenfeld for detecting and quantifying the derivatized analytes. It is the examiner's position that prostaglandin constitutes a drug of abuse because it is a hormone-like substance that may be used improperly. With respect to specific drugs of abuse other than THC and prostaglandin, and derivatizing agents other than those disclosed by Rosenfeld, Rosenfeld teaches that the method is widely applicable to drug, herbicide and pesticide residues (col. 7, lines 28-

Art Unit: 1743

32) and it would have been obvious to perform the method on the claimed classes of compounds as known drugs, using known classes of derivatizing agents.

9. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

10. Apffel additionally teaches dual derivatizing agents in a detection method.
